In competition the direct aim is the success of the actor in achieving the goal; indirectly, it may result in the failure of the competition but in conflict the direct result of the action of one person is to impede, prevent or destroy the act of another. For example, a running race is a competition, whereas a bull fight is a conflict.

There are other distinctions also between competition and conflict, which may be presented as under:

Competition	Conflict
Unconscious process	Conscious process
Impersonal process	Personalized process
Continuous process	Intermittent process for a
